THE GREAT DEBATE

White Acres Fishery Manager Clint Elliott has announced that in 2005 pellets will be allowed in the Spring and Autumn Festivals. Despite the bagging granules having been a very effective bait for several years at White Acres the big sponsored festival match calendars have always seen the potent fish catchers on the banned list but now Clint has decided the time for change has arrived.

For several years a reluctance by many match anglers to fish pellet-allowed events was reflected at White Acres, but now more and more 'top rods' are warming to the bait.

'The main decision to change to low oil pellet is for fish preservation, and when we had a vote among festival anglers the result was a significant majority in favour of including pellet for future events,' said Clint.

However he was quick to point out that only the White Acres brand coarse pellets will be allowed for feeding while any brand of hooker pellet will be ok.

'We don't have a halibut fishery, we don't have a trout fishery but we do have a coarse fishery and so we only allow coarse pellets,' he quipped.

'Low oil coarse pellets are designed to promote healthy coarse fish while high oil trout and halibut pellets are better suited to trout,' he went on.

Water quality is also an issue with high oil baits having caused problems at other venues.

'In fact,' he said, 'there is even more fatty oil in a cube of meat than a coarse pellet'.

'I have decided to allow any brand of hooker pellet purely because these are only for the hook and not to be fed into the swim, therefore the quantities of the hookers that will find their way into our waters will be just a mere blip compared to the amount of feed pellets,' revealed Clint.

EXPANSION PLANS

White Acres holiday park is already the largest angling facility of its kind but moves are a foot to buy up even more land to develop further lakes and create a massive choice for anglers and their families. It's early days at the moment, but we are in talks for approximately 17 acres of land that would provide us with more lakes.

LADIES FIRST

The first ever White Acres Ladies Festival commencing July 3rd will see 30 female anglers take to the banks in competition against each other and the field will include 5 England Internationals with double Ladies World Champion Sandra Scotthorne planning to fish.

The format of the event has yet to be finalised but is likely to include a team as well as individual match and we'll have a full report in the next issue.
